

Supplementary Material

Stability, Structure, and Permeability Studies of Copper Tripeptide Species in Aqueous Solution

Ahmed N. Hammouda,^{A,B,D} Fatin M. Elmagbari,^{A,B} Graham E. Jackson,^A Giselle M. Vicatos,^A Raffaele P. Bonomo,^C and Gabriele Valora^C

^ADepartment of Chemistry, University of Cape Town, Rondebosch 7700, South Africa.

^BDepartment of Chemistry, Faculty of Science, University of Benghazi, Qar Yunis, Benghazi, PO Box 9480, Libya.

^CDepartment of Chemical Sciences, University of Catania, Viale A. Doria 6, 95125, Italy.

^DCorresponding author. Email: Ahmed.hammouda@uct.ac.za

Figure S1: ^1H NMR spectra of Sar-Lys-Lys from pH 2.02 to pH 11.01. Note the break in the f_1 dimension at 4.4 ppm. The proton assignments are according to Figure 1.

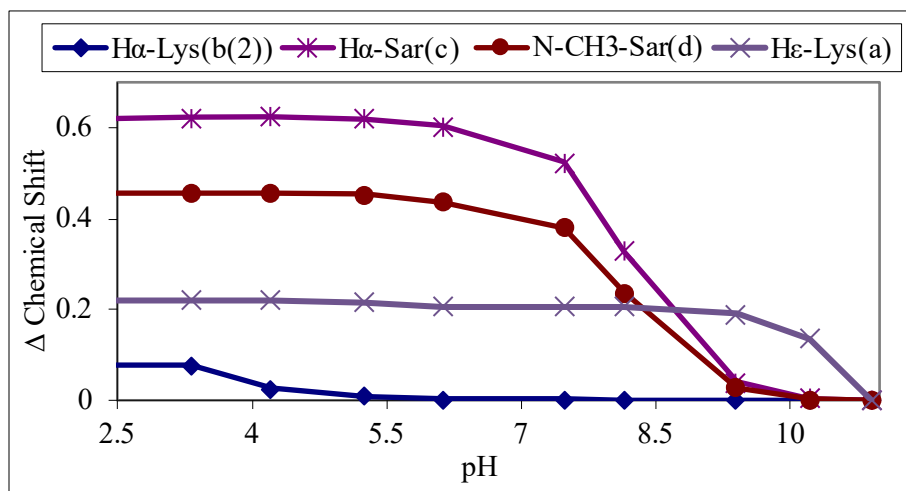

Figure S2: Change of chemical shifts of selected protons of Sar-Lys-Lys as a function of pH. The assignment is given in Figure 1.