HOW DOES OUR HEALTH SYSTEM MEASURE UP?

Reporting on performance: the views of consumers, providers and regulators

Following the success of The Great Healthcare Challenge in 2011, the Australian Council on Healthcare Standards (ACHS) and the Australian Healthcare and Hospitals Association (AHHA) will again join forces in 2012 to bring you – How does our health system measure up?
Reporting on performance: the views of consumers, providers and regulators.

Whether you are a clinician, a manager or finance officer, you are required to measure and assess your outcomes. The National Health Reform will put this part of your job under the microscope.

How do we measure individual patient outcomes or population health status? How do we relate financial performance to both utilisation and quality? Do we collect and link our data efficiently to reduce the red tape burden? How will the National Standards, mandatory from 1st January 2013, influence our administrative and clinical priorities? How will the national entities such as the National Health Performance Authority (NHPA), the Australian Institute of Health and Welfare (AIHW) and the Independent Hospital Pricing Authority plus their state counterparts rationalize their roles? How will they incentivise good performance?

This conference will discuss these questions and highlight the views of key stakeholders.

We will answer the key question – “Are we really a high performing health system”?

WHO SHOULD ATTEND?

This conference will appeal to a wide cross-section of the public and private healthcare sectors across rural, regional and metro areas. If you work in a healthcare facility or department as a clinician, a clinical leader, a manager or executive, a finance officer or an information officer you will find this Conference useful and stimulating.

I'M EXPLORING THE ISSUES

The Health Law program at Sydney Law School is designed to both challenge and inspire, and provides a unique opportunity for dialogue between legal and health care professionals. Indeed, this is one of its greatest strengths.

Dr Kristin Savell, Health Law Program Coordinator

Sydney Law School offers Australia's leading specialist program in health and medical law, available to doctors and other medical specialists. Choose from:

- Master of Health Law
- Graduate Diploma in Health Law
- Graduate Diploma in Public Health Law

Postgraduate Courses in Health Services Research

The Health Services Research courses, run in the Sydney CBD by the UOW, provide education in skills important to research on the effectiveness, cost, quality and sustainability of the health system. These are important issues at any time but particularly in the context of national health reform.

The website: ahsri.uow.edu.au/graduateprogram provides further information on this course and related subjects on survey methods.

For more details on the enrolment process please see the Application and Admission page: uow.edu.au/sbs/future/applicationandadmission
