Navigate health law issues

Designed specifically for senior medical staff, health administrators and managers, QUT's new Graduate Certificate in Applied Law (Health) gives you the expertise you need to navigate legal mine fields in health law.

You can choose from more than 15 units to tailor your learning to your work environment with a range of areas including capacity and guardianship, genetic technologies, conception and birth, biotechnology law, children's health, health economics, quality management and risk management.

And you'll be taught by lecturers who not only wrote the book on health law in Australia, but understand the clinical context.

Finish in just one year, part time. Many units are taught online and are available as standalone units for professional development.

Apply now at www.qut.edu.au/applied-law, or contact us at lawandjustice@qut.edu.au or (07) 3138 2707.
