

PACIFIC CONSERVATION BIOLOGY

Volume 22 • Issue 1 • 2016

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL

Teaching and research: challenges for academic staff

S. Briggs

1

RESEARCH PAPERS

Does the grey nurse shark (Carcharias taurus) exhibit agonistic pectoral fin depression? A stereo-video photogrammetric assessment off eastern Australia

K. R. Smith, C. Scarpaci, B. M. Loudon and N. M. Otway

3

Tussock and sod tussock grasslands of the New England Tablelands Bioregion of eastern Australia

J. T. Hunter and V. H. Hunter

12

Indicators of herbivorous fish biomass in community-based marine management areas in Fiji

S. Albert, A. Tawake, R. Vave, P. Fisher and A. Grinham

20

Incidental impacts from major road construction on one of Asia's most important wetlands: the Inner Gulf of Thailand

N. Tantipisanuh, G. A. Gale and P. D. Round

29

Quality not quantity: conserving species of low mobility and dispersal capacity in south-western Australian urban remnants

L. D. Mason, G. Wardell-Johnson and B. York Main

37

Camera traps in the canopy: surveying wildlife at tree hollow entrances

N. Cotsell and K. Vernes

48

Assessment of the network of protected areas for birds in Taiwan with regard to functional and phylogenetic diversity

H. Chen, S. Nagai and H. Kishino

61

Does the whale shark aggregate along the Western Australian coastline beyond Ningaloo Reef?

B. M. Norman, S. Reynolds and D. L. Morgan

72

Book reviews

81