Supplementary material

Evaluation of the Weather Research and Forecasting model in simulating fire weather for the south-west of Western Australia

Jatin Kala\textsuperscript{A,C}, Alyce Sala Tenna\textsuperscript{A}, Daniel Rudloff\textsuperscript{A,B}, Julia Andrys\textsuperscript{A}, Ole Rieke\textsuperscript{A,B} and Thomas J. Lyons\textsuperscript{A}

\textsuperscript{A}Environmental and Conservation Sciences and Centre for Climate Impacted Terrestrial Ecosystems, Harry Butler Institute, Murdoch University, Murdoch, WA 6150, Australia.

\textsuperscript{B}Climate Physics: Meteorology and Physical Oceanography, Kiel – Christian-Albrechts-Universität zu Kiel, Kiel 24118, Germany.

\textsuperscript{C}Corresponding author. Email: J.Kala@murdoch.edu.au
Figure S1: Scatter plots of evapotranspiration (ET, mm) from Kumar and Dharssi (2017) at all stations (Figure 1), against WRF ET at the same locations.
Figure S2: Same as in Figure S1 but for precipitation (mm)