Australian Journal of Primary Health integrates the theory and practise of community health services and primary health care. The journal publishes high-quality, peer-reviewed research, reviews, policy reports and analyses from around the world. Articles cover a range of issues influencing community health services and primary health care, particularly comprehensive primary health care research, evidence-based practice (excluding discipline-specific clinical interventions) and primary health care policy issues.

Australian Journal of Primary Health is an important international resource for all individuals and organisations involved in planning, provision or practise of primary health care.

JOURNAL METRICS

METRICS

These metrics are shared as a way of quantifying the impact this journal has on the research community. However, they should always be considered in the context of how they are calculated, and we emphasise that none of these journal-level metrics should be used to judge the impact of an individual article or author, or their research outputs.
