

AUSTRALIAN HEALTH REVIEW

publish.csiro.au/ah

> SCOPE

Australian Health Review is an international, peer-reviewed journal that publishes contributions on all aspects of health policy, management and governance; healthcare delivery systems; workforce; health financing; and other matters of interest to those working in health care. In addition to analyses and commentary, the journal publishes original research from practitioners – managers and clinicians – and reports of breakthrough projects that demonstrate better ways of delivering care.

Australian Health Review explores major national and international health issues and questions, enabling health professionals to keep their fingers on the pulse of the nation's health decisions and to know what the most influential commentators and decision makers are thinking.

JOURNAL METRICS

> METRICS

These metrics are shared as a way of quantifying the impact this journal has on the research community. However, they should always be considered in the context of how they are calculated, and we emphasise that none of these journal-level metrics should be used to judge the impact of an individual article or author, or their research outputs.
